Most of the population growth in Texas is due to increased numbers of Texans of color. Any redistricting must reflect this growth and the fact that most of the growth was in urban areas.