Message:

In Texas state-wide races, Republican candidates generally collect about 55% of the votes. As such, the current mix of 25 Republicans and 13 Democrats (about 66% Republican) in our U.S. House delegation already over-represents Republicans here. The proposed re-districting plan, which if fulfilled would switch 5 House seats from Democrat to Republican would result in a 30-8 split (about 79% Republican) which blatantly subverts the original idea of the House being representative of the people. Therefore, do the right thing and leave the congressional districts as they are now and do not succumb to political pressure to make the Texas House delegation even more un-representative of Texas citizens.
