Message:

I'm opposed to the redistricting of TX for a number of reasons, but I feel like the first and most important reason is that there is not a genuine reason for The Republican Party to do this. It erodes public faith in our democratic process. Members of our black and brown community have been systematically disenfranchised throughout our heavily gerrymandered district enough. I would like to be able to say with enough faith that our political system is a representational democracy. When devastating floods ripped through the hill country of central Texas Trump and others made a big show of coming down to "support". The truth is that Trump is depending on silencing voices of dissent that would vote to oust him from power. The United States is watching and it's faith in our government is on trial right now. We need people to be firm in their belief that if they vote, it will count, because their voice matters. Abbott shouldn't feel free to pick and choose who to represent, it's his job to represent all of the voices of our state.
