Message:

With Texas' growth in population, you have been assigned to the very important and complicated task of drawing roughly equally populated districts to guarantee equal voter representation.

Past Texas history and court rulings have highlighted that the later purpose has not always been the objective. Then when political leaders specifically direct that the lines be drawn to give their political party the advantage, anger and distrust explode. We are a stronger, more productive, and resilient community when we are willing to work together. I urge you to set aside attempted party manipulations, and let some of the following considerations be part of your guide:

- . Residents should have easy & safe access to their voting options, locations & elected representatives
 - . Representatives should be able understand and advocate for their community's needs.
 - . Residents and representatives should be motivated to work together and create opportunities and programs that can build and bring out the best in each other.
