Message:

I oppose the mid-decade redistricting attempt brought on by our authoritarian President's demand to the Governor. Remember the times when we used to say "Don't Mess with Texas?" Well that's what the response should be now. All Texans deserve equal and fair representation and for their votes to count.

I am currently represented by Congressman Lloyd Doggett in District 37, but because of the convoluted redrawing of that district specifically impacting NW Austin that representation is now unclear. I heard Rep Hickland speak about the shape /gerrymandering of District 35, but I would argue that has now been redone with the "cracks" through my current district.

Just a little background to reflect my love and loyalty for Texas and Texans. I grew up in a small town and came to Austin to attend UT. I spent summers exploring Texas with my family and given the vast size of our State still spend multiple weekends a year exploring the people, culture, and history of around Texas. And because of my love of this state and all of our residents Black, White, Hispanic and all others, I believe it is imperative that representation directly reflects the constituents in alignment with their populations.

It has become clear that some in this state would rather cater to a person who does not reflect Texas values and whose fear of being recognized in the near future as the biggest LOSER is more important than reflecting the diversity of people that make Texas great.

Texas only wins with equal representation and voice.
I strongly believe that if you have to CHEAT to win,
you are still a LOSER. A better Texas and true Winner in all of this would be to oppose this map
now and for true representation propose fair districts for representation of all Texans.
