I'm trying to understand why this is happening in a non census time. Things were balanced and albeit still a little wacky, this is clearly gerrymandering. At what point will the Texas government actually listen to the constituents, who do not want this, instead of the Federal government. If Texas was truly a "Don't Tread on Me" state that longed for local control, they would abstain from entertaining the President and instead use the special session to help the victims of the floods in central Texas.
