Message:

I urge you to reject the proposed mid-decade redistricting plans. These changes undermine the principles of fair representation by disregarding communities of interest and diluting the voices of voters across Texas. Redistricting should be based on new census data, not political expediency. Manipulating district lines outside of the standard cycle erodes public trust in our democratic institutions and wastes taxpayer resources. Texans deserve stable, transparent, and representative districts—not maps drawn to serve partisan interests.

As an Austin resident and creative professional, I'm deeply concerned about the proposed mid-decade redistricting plans. These changes feel like a cynical attempt to manipulate representation rather than serve the people of Texas. Our voices—especially in creative, diverse, and growing communities like Austin—deserve to be heard, not carved up for political gain. Redistricting should follow the census cycle, not shift with the winds of power. I urge you to protect public trust, respect community integrity, and reject this unnecessary and harmful redistricting effort.
