Message:

I am a Texas resident and I'm writing to express my strong opposition to the gerrymandered district maps currently being proposed. These maps clearly prioritize political gain over fair representation, and they do not reflect the true diversity or needs of our communities.

Gerrymandering has long been used in Texas to dilute the voices of voters—especially Black, Latino, Asian, and Indigenous communities. By splitting up neighborhoods and grouping people in unnatural ways, these maps silence voters and weaken our democracy.

As a Texan, I want competitive, fair districts that represent real communities—not maps drawn behind closed doors to protect incumbents or one political party.

I urge the redistricting committee to stop the manipulation of district boundaries and instead focus on transparency, public input, and the Voting Rights Act. Texans deserve maps that serve the people—not the politicians.
