Hi- I am frustrated with the Texas government trying to pursue redistricting areas within our state. There has not been a change in census numbers, the lines were already drawn out recently by mostly republican officials a few years back to fit their needs then.

I just look at these meaningless lines that are not only unfair to our voters but have also just become a game where the rules are ever changing and work to keep the corrupt government from getting any better.

It is sad to me. Sad that our votes don't really represent the people.

I wish every citizen had equal representation in this state. I hope in our future we have people with integrity who care about righting this process for everyone- republicans and democrats. We shouldn't be drawing lines to ensure one party's success. It goes against everything I thought the US stood for.
